

Confolens / Massignac

La Scandibérique

Leaving Confolens's medieval bridge behind, the route takes you beside the Vienne River up to Exideuil, the way revealing more and more of the Charente area's character, the Château de la Chétardie even being the seat of a Confrérie du Cognac, a fraternity for the famed brandy spirit! In this eastern part of the county, or département, of Charente, the lakes of Lavaud and Mas Chaban were created to help regulate the lack of water in the Charente River certain summers; they also offer nautical activities and places for bird-watching, nice ways to take a break before riding on to Massignac, just a few kilometres on, and a place for a stopover on the route.

The route

Along minor roads with some good slopes. This stage is physically demanding. Take care at the junctions with the D948 road at Confolens and the RN141 road after Exideuil. Signposted EV3.
